Terrence M. Gilbride appointed to City Preservation Board

The Buffalo History Museum Board of Managers has voted to appoint Terrence M. Gilbride to the Preservation Board of the City of Buffalo, which reviews all exterior changes to landmark properties and properties located within City of Buffalo Preservation Districts. The Buffalo History Museum has one of 11 appointments to the board.

A partner at the Buffalo law firm Hodgson Russ LLP, Gilbride focuses his practice on large, multifaceted commercial real estate development projects. He heads the firm's College & University and Public-Private Partnership Practice Groups. Gilbride has significant experience in student housing development, construction and financing, historic preservation matters, hotel acquisition and financing transactions, public/private partnerships and nonprofit-sponsored real estate development projects. He also has experience regarding sports facility leasing and development, industrial development agency projects, commercial real estate financing transactions, and leasing.

“Terry is a natural fit for this appointment,” said Melissa Brown, executive director of The Buffalo History Museum. “His breadth of experience, especially in matters of historic preservation, will well-serve the city, the Preservation Board and those who are keenly interested and supportive of Buffalo’s ongoing commitment to safeguarding our architectural treasures.”

“I am honored to represent the Buffalo History Museum and excited to be part of the preservation and restoration of our city’s rich architectural legacy,” Gilbride said. “I look forward to working with my fellow board members on continuing the good work of the Historic Preservation Board.”
